VOLUME LXVI.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 25, 1865

NUMBER 111

PUBLISHED (DAILY) BY
EDGAR SNOWDEN, SR.
OFFICE—No. 111 King street, over
Sons's (formerly French's) Book Store.

THE GRAND REVIEW closed in Washington yesterday. The crowd of spectators was much greater than it was on Tuesday, the cause of this being that all who had come to see the Army of the Potomac, remained to see Sherman's, and their numbers were largely increased. General Sherman appeared at the head of his Army, and was greeted with cheers on all sides, which continued from the Capitol to the President's House. The scene was a very imposing one. "The rolling mass of cavalry, preceded by the generals, each surrounded by his numerous and brilliant staff sweeps past, and the fluttering of banners, the far away gleam of ten thousand bayonets rising and sinking in the undulations of the marching columns, the roll of the artillery, and the swelling strains of martial music, the shouts from the thronged pavements and housetops"—all this contributed to make the Review a spectacle never to be forgotten by those who saw it.

GEN. SHERMAN.—The Washington Star says;—"There is a current report amongst newspaper men to day, that Major Gen. Sherman has written a letter for publication, dated at his camp, near Alexandria, and addressed to S. M. Bowman, in which he roundly abuses the War Department and quotes Shakespeare to a considerable extent, appropos to the disapproval by the Government of his terms of pacification with Gen. Johnston."

The Star deprecates Gen. Sherman's course. The Washington Chronicle refers to the expected publication of General Sherman's report, and hopes that the "General's feelings will yet be moderated."

The Washington Star speaking of the incidents of the Review, says:—"After the Second Division of the Twentieth Corps there followed a large number of pack horses and mules, preceded by two contraband boys riding diminutive white donkeys, the appearance of which was greeted with shouts of laughter throughout the entire line of march. This portion of the procession was a portion of the celebrated flying transportation department of Sherman's army. Mounted upon some of the mules were a number of chicken cocks and some hens, while two or three cows and several goats and dogs were also in the line. On inquiry we were told that most of this truck was taken from the plantations of prominent rebels, as were also the contrabands who were leading the stock. Among other animals was a mule which was brought from Jeff. Davis's plantation."

The departure of General Sheridan, with his staff, for the west bank of the Mississippi betokens immediate activity in that quarter. He will have, it is announced, chief command of all the forces in the Trans Mississippi, while Gen. Steele's corps is already en route from Alabama to join those troops.

A muster out encampment for the troops from Western New York is to be established at Rochester.
